Abstract: The objective of this study is to determine empirically the existence of difference in each of six dimensions of Manager's Empowerment functions and to recognize their managerial tendencies in human resources in the Evia income Tax Office in Greece. The dimensions of Manager's Empowerment Functions that were considered were the Informational Role, the Decision-Making Role, the Planning Role, the Evaluating Role, the Motivating Role and the Developing Role. We used a sample of 30 managers and a factor analysis was conducted on the results of the questionnaire. The principle question of this paper was how those in power exercise the six Managers Empowering Roles in the above organization. The results of this survey are that managers do not always encourage the transfer of power and authority to the fullest in order to maximize their skills to the maximum.

Keywords: Empowerment, Tax Office, Informational role, Decision-making role, Planning role.

I. INTRODUCTION

Owing to the fact that we are experiencing continuing Environmental, Economic and Demographic shifts, human resources concepts need to deal with these changes by repositioning the leadership model to the realities of the new world. Naturally, the broad definition of human resource management would be incomplete without further explaining what we mean by such terms as "human resources" and "management".

For this action the human factor through his muscular and intellectual force (Konstantopoulos et al., 2009a, Konstantopoulos et al., 2009b), is called to play the being first energetic role, bodily, responsibly, effectively and in time with anthropocentric operation without handings - over in the institutions, in order to it manages the remainder productive factors as, the buildings, the machines and the systems. As a process the Empowerment is a combination that transfers the power, responsibility and the encouragement of workers in order to achieve higher productions combined with the highest job satisfaction.

The concept of Empowerment could be defined as a process and as a result. As a process, the Empowerment is a combination of actions that transition decisions, the power and responsibility from managers to employees, so to achieve the highest possible performance, combined with the highest satisfaction from the work. As a result, the Empowerment is how we feel and behave workers. As a multidimensional concept, the empowerment consists from next dimensions that are, a sense of the meaning of work expressing the emotional connection with the worker's work, a sense of competence expressing the confidence of employees and the feeling that he has the potential and ability to do his work effectively, a sense of self-determination expressed the feeling that the worker has the discretion/ autonomy / freedom and control initiatives needed to make his work more effectively and a sense of influence and impact which reflects the perception that the worker can work through to exercise influence.

The Manager's Role includes the following six Manager's Empowerment functions. The empowered manager's Informational role who had applied information and communication system skills, the empowered manager's Decision role who had applied decision making and action taking skills, the empowered manager's Planning role who had applied project planning and organizing system skills, the empowered manager's Evaluator role who had applied systems evaluation and internal control skills, the empowered manager's Motivating role who had applied the leadership motivation and reward systems skills and the empowered manager's Development role who had applied selection, placement and development of people skills. The above managerial skills and how Empowering Managers use them it was described by investigators (Vogt and Murrell, 1990).

Others investigators (Kirkman and Rosen, 1996), (Konczak and Trusty, 1996), (Zimmerman and et al., 1992) defined that the Empowerment of human resources is not an unknown issue or insufficient. However in Greece there have not been investigations in the Public Sectors. It is important, therefore, to examine the origins and meaning of Empowerment, the extent to which it has been introduced in Greek public organizations, and the obstacles to its successful implementation. Effective implementation of Empowerment is a difficult, risky behavior, but the payoff is likely to be worth the price.

II. METHODS

The method of selection of the sample was designed to meet the requirements of the investigation. So the sample was chosen to be from the manager's in Tax Office of Evia Greece. We investigate the tendencies of Manager's Empowerment Functions. The questionnaire that has been described by investigators (Vogt et al., 1990) consisted of 30 questions. For the verification of these groups of functions has planned a brand of five Color Zones. The red zone reflects the managers who tightly control the power in the organization, use the least Empowering style of management, are very concerned with control or power, the orange zone represents a managerial style that is more control oriented and less empowering or oriented toward sharing power, the yellow zone who reflects the managers who rarely acts in the extreme in matters concerning the use of power, the blue zone who reflects the managers who uses a style that is more Empowering than controlling and the green zone who reflects the managers who not only shares but creates power. The whole survey was conducted in 2010.

III. RESULTS

In order to meet the objective of the study, a descriptive analysis has been performed on the variables. For the statistical analysis it was used the statistical program S.P.S. S. 17.0. Statistics for the dependent variable of Management-Information communication system skills, Decision making and action taking skills, project Planning organizing and system Integration skills, system Evaluation and internal control skills, leadership Motivation and reward system skills, selection placement and Development of people skills (Mean, Std. Deviation, etc.) in Tax Offices are presented in (fig 1). The differences observed in the value of mean due to the different number of questions that was included each aspect of the Manager's Empowerment Functions.

	Mean	Std. Deviation.	Std. Er. Mean
Management - Information	36,5	9,31	1,7
Decision making	34,6	9,69	1,77
Project Planning	30	9,52	1,73
System Evaluation	34,4	9,26	1,69
Leadership Motivation	29,7	8,76	1,6
Selection placement and Development	30,9	10,96	2,00

Table 1. The Manager's Empowerment Functions

Statistics for the dependent variable of Red zone, Orange zone, Yellow zone, Blue zone and Green zone, percentages appeared for each of the six Manager's Empowerment Function. The differences observed in the value of percent due to the different number of questions that was included each aspect of the color zones.

The managers in the case of Informational Function and Decision making Function (fig 2.) and (fig.3) only one third of them prefer to use the managerial style that creates the power of Empowerment. In Informational Function more than fifty percent and in Decision making Function at least fifty percent intend applying a style that is more Empowering than controlling.

In the case of Planning Function, (fig.4) approximately only one tenth of the managers creates power. Approximately forty per cent are considering applying a style that is more empowering than controlling. Fifty per cent prefer to act in the extreme in matters concerning the use of power.

The managers in the case of Evaluating Function (fig.5) only one ten of them they creates the power of empowerment.

The managers in the case of Motivating Function (fig.6) they don't create the power of empowerment, because they prefer to use only 3,3 per cent. Approximately forty per cent prefer to apply a style that is more empowering than controlling.

The managers that use the behavior of Developing Function (fig.7) prefer to use only 13,3 per cent of the power of empowerment.

The managers in the case of all Management Functions (fig.8) they don't create the power of empowerment, because they prefer to use only 3,3 per cent.

III. CONCLUSIONS

The results obtained show that the levels of all management styles who occurred from color zones means that the organizations are in the earliest stage of Empowering their human resources and needs to implement more powerful managerial skills with effective methods and procedures to creating better and more human organizations.

The base of relative researches should be drawn the suitable education managing and be accompanied from the suitable institutional frame. The intensification is considered as a organizing need that in order to it is built, it is created and it is required a lot of long-term planning, time, effort and capable and empowered executives. Because the Empowerment depends on a lot of factors it will supposedly be included in entire the system of administration because it cannot be considered as separate and independent phenomenon.

The Manager's Empowerment functions is necessary to be apply now in public Organizations because become efforts for development of Public Administration in Greece. In any case a move forward on this matter will demand more detailed empirical investigation, which could be applied in Tax Offices and general in Public Administration.

Our objectives are the Human Recourses to be able for constitute source of competitive advantage, with the increase of efficiency and their effectiveness. In order to can the Public Administration, covers the modern needs of Greek society.
